

Abstract of the Disclosure

A stand for lifting the front end of a motorcycle that includes a base pivotally connected to an upper support structure. The base consists of a support frame with fulcrum wheels attached; a lever arm extends forward from the base for operation by hand. The upper support structure has adjustable brackets at the connection with the base that allows for height adjustment of the stand for motorcycles of various heights or for lifting the same motorcycle to different heights as desired.